COLORADO EVALUATION
AND ACTION LAB

The Colorado Evaluation and Action Lab is a part of the Barton Institute for Philanthropy and Social Enterprise at the University of Denver. The Colorado Lab's mission is to improve services to Colorado residents, by working with government partners to conduct research and translate it into action.

When should you contact the Lab?

The Colorado Lab focuses on the power of research to inform decisions, drive actions, and improve services. We support state and local agencies, philanthropic funders, and community partners. We suggest you contact the Lab when any one of the following is true:

- You want research partners who take a family- or problem-centered approach to policy implementation.
- You seek to identify and meet the needs of people who are served through multiple government systems (e.g., public benefits, corrections, housing, and education).
- You recognize the information you need requires integrated data across public systems.
- You require cross-agency or state-local partnerships to address a concern, challenge, or research question (e.g., system-involved youth or highly-mobile families).
- You value the power of data in informing your funding strategies.
- You seek a sustainable process for evaluating the impact of your investments.
- You need actionable research to guide decisions related to one of the Governor's priority areas:
 - Move electric grid to renewable sources by 2040
 - Foster an economy that works for everyone
 - Fulfill every child's potential regardless of zip code
 - Save Coloradans money on healthcare
 - Reduce recidivism for adults and juveniles
 - Prevention/intervention: child welfare, justice-involved youth
 - Cross-system solutions for Coloradans
- You need a matchmaker - we can connect you to our network of researchers at universities and research firms throughout Colorado and across the country.
